Thousands of Central Americans are leaving their homes in El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras to seek refuge in the United States. What is propelling their mass exodus and why should U.S. society care? This talk provides the political and social context for U.S.-Central American relations from the 1980s to the present to better understand how U.S. foreign policies in the region and immigration policies at home shape the current situation.

Friday, March 12, 12-1:30pm EST

COMMUNISTS, CRIMINALS, AND CARAVANS: THE SOCIAL CONSTRUCTION OF CENTRAL AMERICANS AS CRISIS

https://msu.zoom.us/j/96430982632

Password: JMC

Meeting ID: 964 3098 2632

SPONSORED BY JAMES MADISON COLLEGE, CHICANO/LATINO STUDIES, DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY, CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN AND CARIBBEAN STUDIES, JMC LATINX UNIDOS, AND COMPARATIVE CULTURES AND POLITICS